2. Commodity & Currency Research Desk

- Rupee in the week traded in volatile range between 81.70-82.30 as the rupee faced weakness after Powell's speech which hinted towards even higher interest rates with further higher peak rates expectation due to positive economic data which can absorb the higher interest rates. But FII's buying in the week helped rupee stabilise and not fall below 82.30 for broad period of time. Crude price weakness as well helped the rupee gain. Rupee volatile range can continue between 81.60-82.30 in further week.
- Gold prices in the week traded weak as prices found weakness in first half of the week after Powell's speech which hinted towards even higher interest rates with further higher peak rates expectation due to positive economic data which can absorb the higher interest rates. This gave dollar index push above 105$ again sending Commodity prices down, the later half gave support to Gold in MCX as rupee weakness along with Comex Gold holding above $1815 pushed higher near $1835 as prices try to counter the unemployment data which is due later in Friday evening. Gold in MCX can be seen in range of 54800-55900
